Bank Al-Maghrib, Cadi Ayyad University and the University of Basel hold the "International Days of Macroeconomics and Finance"

Marrakech, May 2, 2019

Bank Al-Maghrib, The INREDD research lab of the Cadi Ayyad University of Marrakech and the Bernoulli Center for Economics (BCE) of the University of Basel (Switzerland) co-organized, on 2nd and 3rd May 2019 in Marrakech, the fourth edition of the International Days of Macroeconomics and Finance; under the theme "Inclusive Growth: A New Development Paradigm".

The purpose of this event is to foster a productive exchange and debate between decision makers, academics and experts on inclusive growth. The choice of this theme was motivated, on the one hand, by the current debates on issues related to poverty, inequalities and sustainable development goals, and on the other hand, by the need to rethink development models at the international level and in Morocco.

During these days, speakers shared their know-how on the issue under discussion in light of international experiences and academic research. Discussions were also initiated on the challenges and prospects for a new development model in Morocco.

Also, in order to promote interactions between Moroccan and foreign academic environments, the organizers selected 22 research projects submitted by researchers from different countries (Germany, South Korea, France, Morocco, Switzerland, Tunisia, Turkey...). The selected papers were presented and discussed by the experts and academics taking part in this event.
